Follow your mobile device manufacturer's instructions for a forced restart. Check your USB cable: If you are using a USB cable to connect your phone and infotainment system, your cable may be bad. If your USB cable is frayed, broken, or only works in one position, replace it with a new one. Reset your Bluetooth connection: You can reset your Toyota's Bluetooth connection to your phone in two ways, it could also be due to a faulty USB connection or incomplete pairing. Keep your operating system current by installing updates regularly. Update your infotainment system: Infotainment systems periodically require software updates. Your phone can also randomly connect to someone else's system. To ensure proper installation of Android Auto and Apple CarPlay, always get your head units upgraded at authorized Toyota dealerships. Toyota has put the power of Android Auto and Apple CarPlay in almost every vehicle in their lineup. Many models also include voice recognition, allowing you to control your phone-linked infotainment system with basic spoken commands. Choose the "Setup" option on your touch screen display menu. Activate Bluetooth on your phone. In the "Bluetooth" portion of your touch screen's Setup menu, choose "Add New Device." Choose your device name from the list shown on your touch screen. A four-digit pin should now be displayed on your phone and the touch screen. Check out your phone as well and delete any connections to unknown vehicles. Update your apps: Install any available updates for Android Auto or Apple CarPlay and try to use your system again. Update your phone's operating system: Android Auto and Apple CarPlay may not work if your phone's operating system is out of date. To use this feature, all you need to do is open your preferred app (Amazon Music, Audible, Spotify, etc.) and set your infotainment system to stream audio from your phone. Digital Assistant: Android's Google Assistant and Apple's Siri For simple voice controls, allowing you to control the audio system, navigation, telephone and text messages without taking your eyes from the road. Third-Party Apps: Android Auto and Apple CarPlay work well with Third-party applications such as Google Maps, Waze, Pandora, Spotify, Audible and Facebook Messenger.
